

Terraces & railings

Generously appointed terraces with planing made of pressure-treated Douglas fir are both inviting, and offer ample space for activities. The wood creates a natural and attractive transition between house and garden.

This design concept can be extended through garden paths made of grooved wooden planks or paving timbers, for instance.

Structural advantages due to rounded floor joists

Technically advanced components, and sub-floor constructions guarantee not only high load bearing capacity and durability. On overhangs in particular, or on uneven terrain, good sub-floor construction can help to avoid expensive earthworks.

Balcony railings

The railing of a balcony has to harmonize with both the balcony and the building. In addition to the visual requirements, safety requirements also have to be fulfilled. Here we present a few classic basic designs. If you would like to make your own design a reality, we will be happy to help you to make it a small work of art. Just ask us.
